Seniors

The recipients of this years' degrees are moving forward into a world that literally promises the moon.

But that silvery path is fraught with pitfalls that have created much confusion and turmoil not only in the world at large, but in all fields of education.

As tired as the old phraseology may be, it is still true that a large measure of responsibility falls to the new graduates of young energetic and hopefully disciplined minds to forge a peaceful, reasonable world out of the current mess.

We have had a knowledge explosion in the biological and physical sciences largely. What we sorely need is new understanding of humanity.

We need the intellectual powers developed by our graduates, and we hope they will see fit to deliberate carefully rather than act presipitously.

WE, the students of Triad High School in order to profit from a more complete education, establish high scholastic standards, insure physical fitness, provide for social activity, promote school spirit, and secure the blessings of knowledge for ourselves and our posterity, do ordain and dedicate this yearbook, as a record of the past, to the prophecy of an even better future.

To those who have gone before us; to those who will come in the future--may Triad High School remain as a living monument to the traditions that we have been a part of----

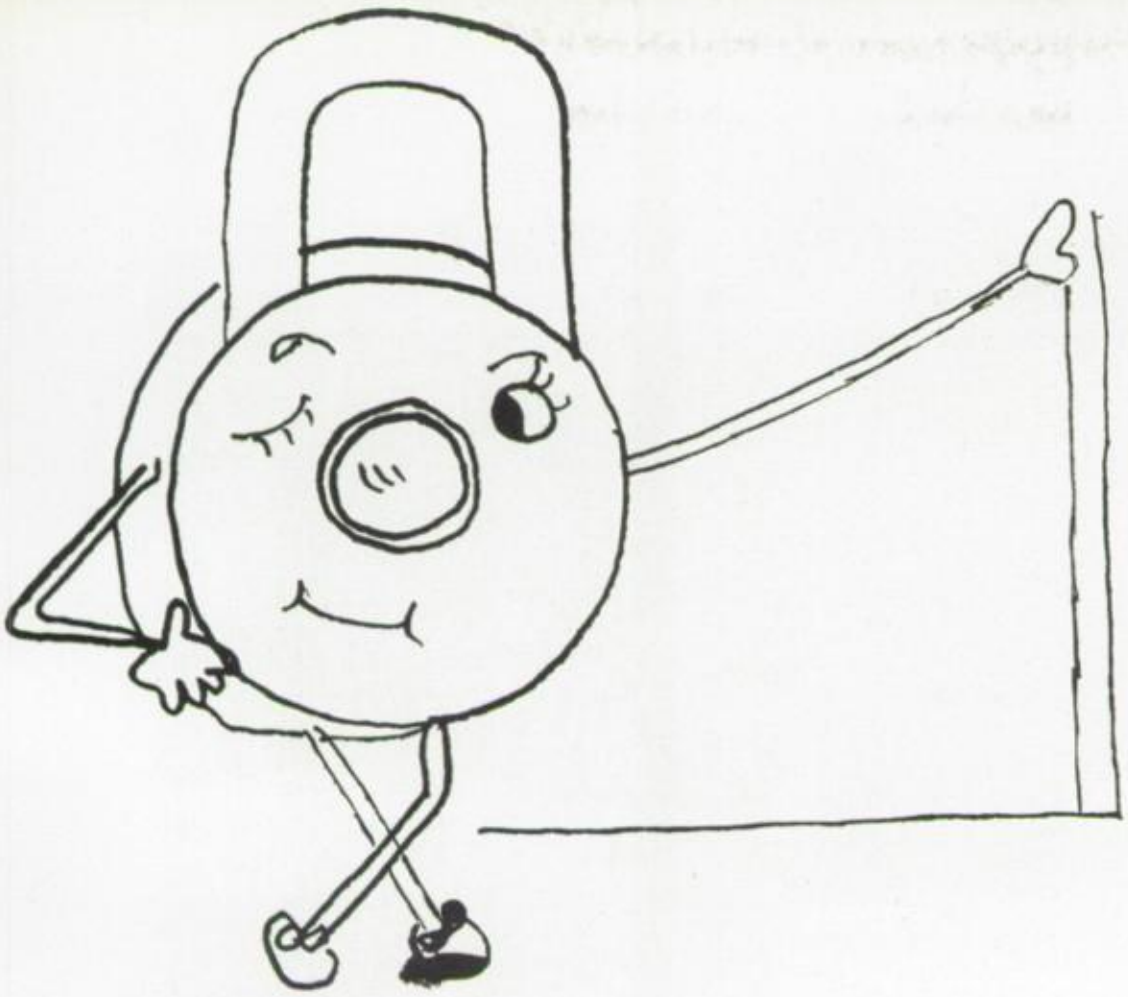
WE, the Seniors of 1966, sincerely hope that the school's future will witness continued progression in education.

Our New Alma Mater

TRIAD HIGH SCHOOL ALMA MATER
Words: Ralph L. Coleman, Class of 1963

Verse 1
Oh TRIAD HIGH, we praise thy name, thy hallowed halls and cherished fame.
Though years may pass and mem'ries fade, still our devotion will remain.
For the knowledge that you gave, shall be with us throughout our days.
Oh TRIAD HIGH, to thee we raise--this, our hymn of grateful praise.

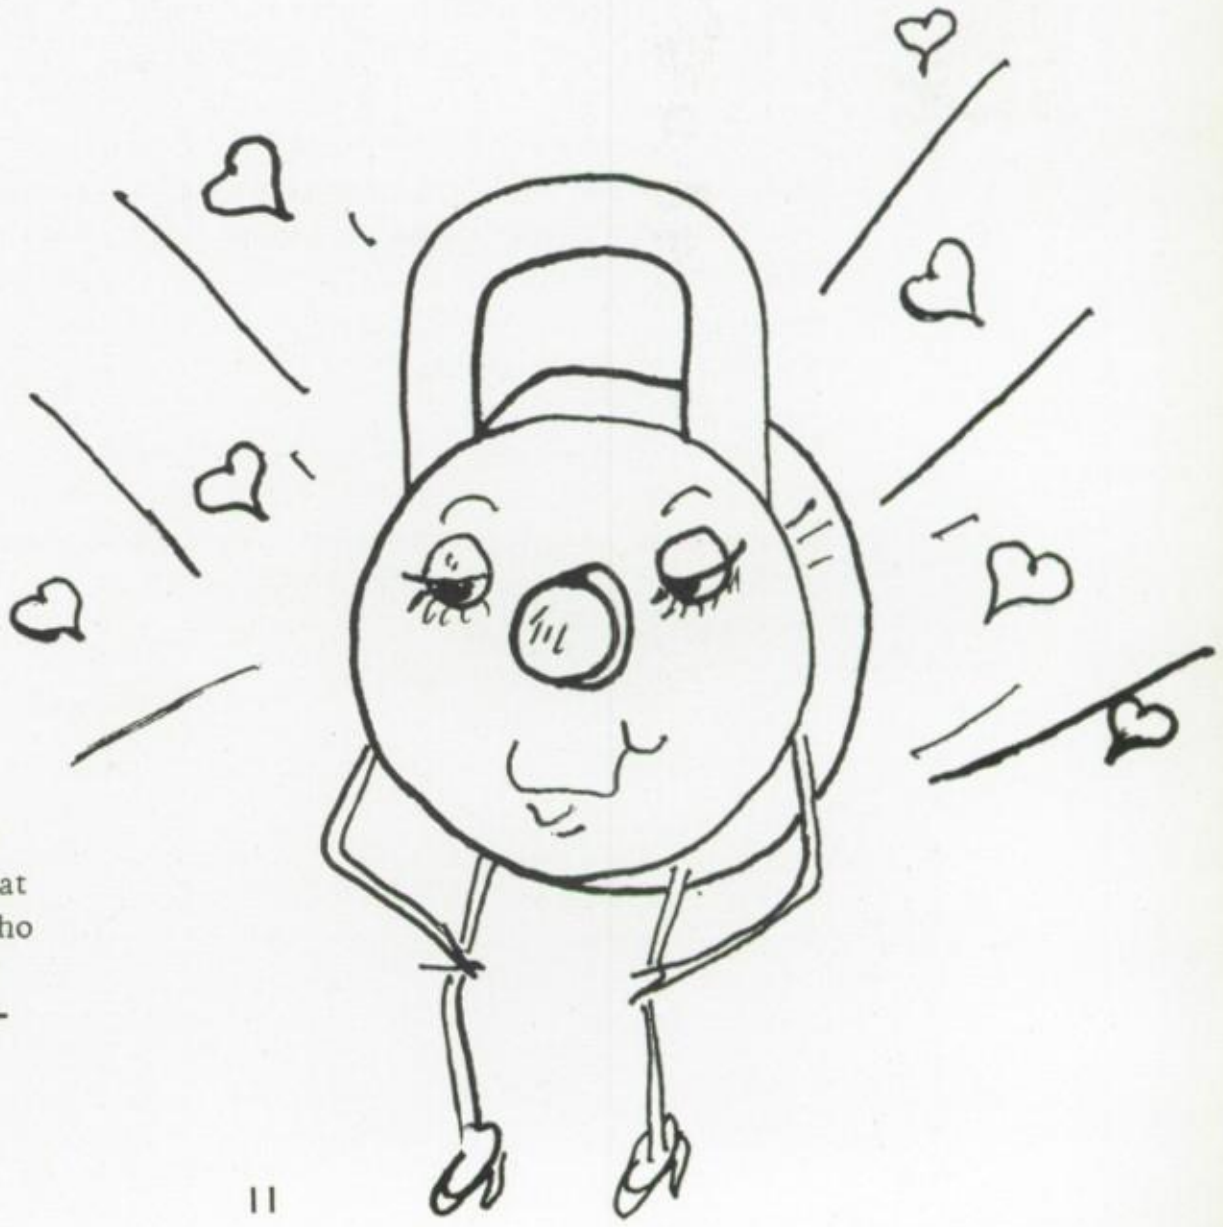
Verse 2
Oh TRIAD HIGH, thy guiding light, shall lead us safely through the night.
In mind and body we shall be--ever faithful unto thee.
With the dawn of each new day, we will be mindful of thy way,
Oh, join the song in voices clear, Oh TRIAD HIGH, to us so dear.



Behind the Combination

Lie all the pictures which reflect

Triad High School



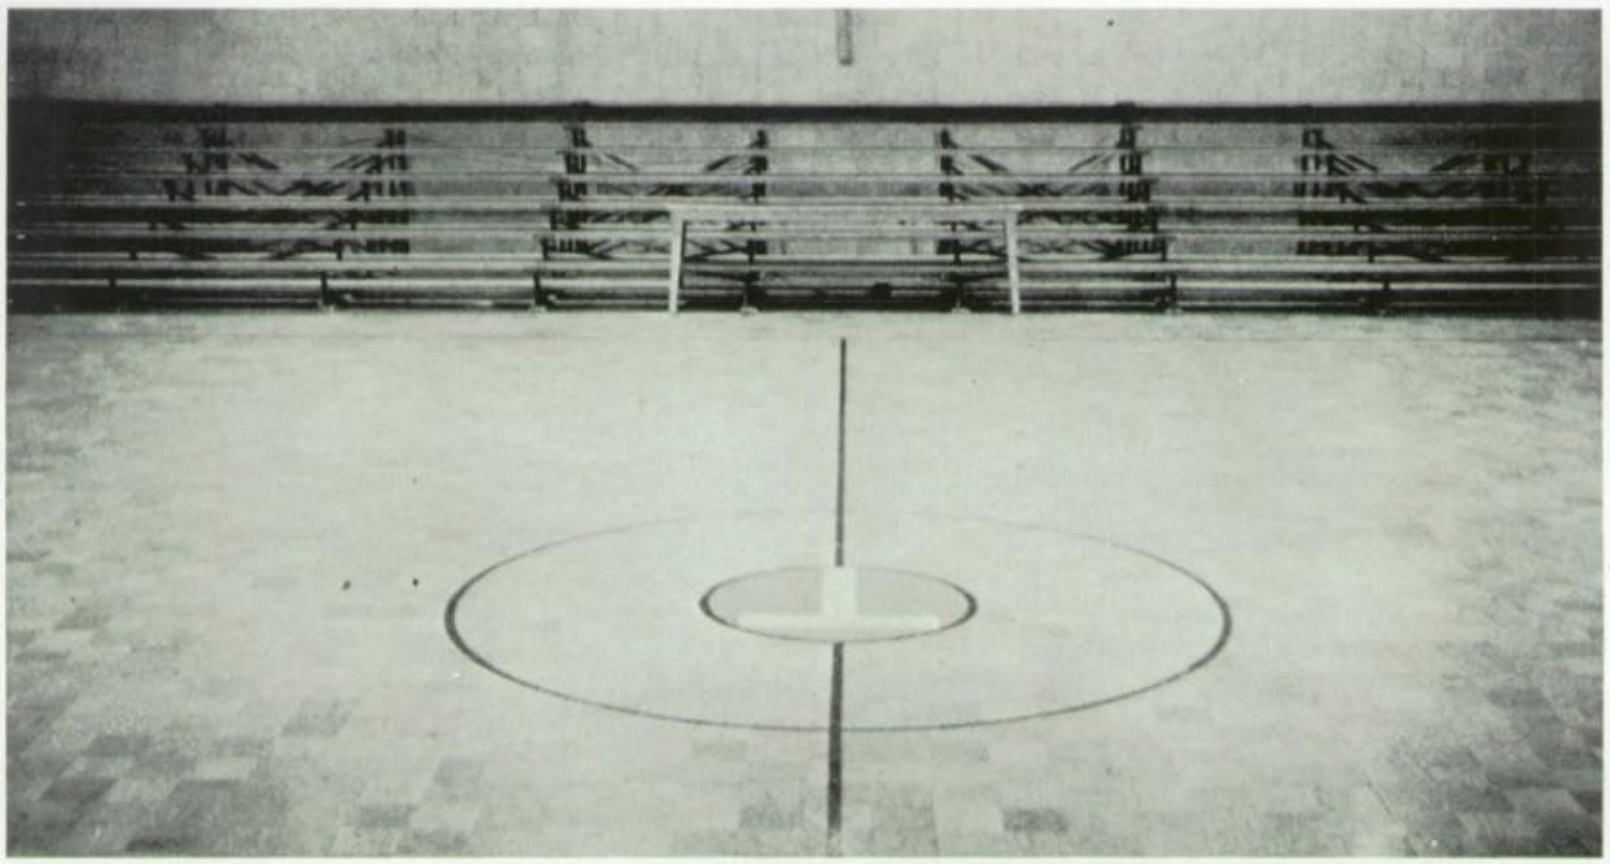
To recall a school year, one thinks of people he knew - the ones who sat next to him or shared his locker, who struggled with the same problem or laughed at the same jokes and incidents.

The pictures of another school year are now the pages of a book already written. The pictures blend to form a phase of life as words combine to form the chapters of a book; each tells its own story.

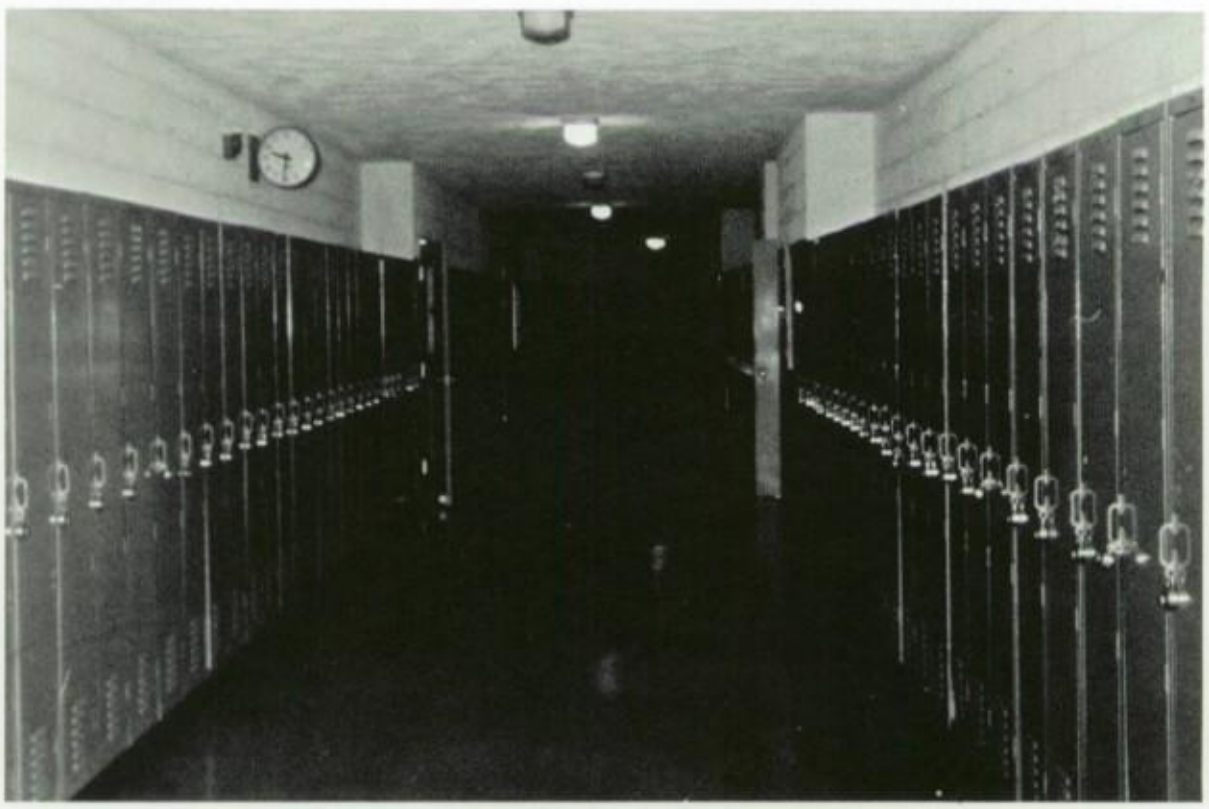
In order to understand the true meaning of a picture, we must be able to analyze the things we see. If we skim through a book, we will probably only touch the surface. In the same way, if we merely look at a picture with no intention of deep study, we may miss the meaning completely. A picture is more than just a combination of people and events. In our case they represent the different phases of school life.

To the lab student, this picture may bring back both good and bad memories. However it is more than just a reminiscence over books--it tells the story of youth at work in the classroom. We see a generation of young people who have been handed such a complex world that education is no longer a privilege, but a necessity.

The story of our Triad Choir is one of deep pride in accomplishment. Yet this is just one outstanding example of the story this picture tells. A choir blends its voices to produce harmony---an orchestra combines the tones of various instruments to give us enjoyable music---even the eleven men of a football team executing a play with precision can be used as an illustration in this story. In all three cases, the talents of individual students are combined with the talents of others and harmony was the product. The application of the story goes farther than the high school years. It teaches us a very important lesson. While the importance of the individual can never be overemphasized, the ability to function harmoniously with others may mean the difference between success and failure.



Now it is night and life is gone. It is though the school is resting. The cheering crowds and the poundings of the basketball have been silent for hours. The gym is empty. The peaceful quiet of the halls waits for tomorrow and the activities of another school day.



The hall of the school suddenly comes to life as the warning bell sends the students to his first class. As he approaches his destination, the satisfaction of homework well done or the uncertainty of unpreparedness may fill his mind---or is the thought of tonight's dance his main interest at the moment?

MRS. WILLIS

MRS. PRATT

Senior Class 1966 - Congratulations! You have earned a diploma, but what picture of your educational background do you carry with you into the world? Is it a picture of hard work and objective viewing of a problem in order to solve it, or do you have a picture of a "gimmie" attitude.

The picture that you carry with you of your educational background will determine your successes of the future. As you look at this year's Yearbook what is the picture, past, present, and future that you see for you?

A. W. Wilgus
Executive Head

We are very much concerned about our pictures. We are concerned about our personal image, but are we interested in the picture others have of us as a person? Are we interested in the educational picture we present to others, not only in grades, but in our education as tools for personal advancement and assistance to mankind?

Let your image so shine that those who know you will be desirous of a similar image.

FIRST DATE IN HIGH SCHOOL

She was a little wisp of a thing when I first saw her, and it being spring naturally my thoughts turned to things romantic. I summoned all the courage I could muster and falteringly asked her for a date. Much to my amazement she most readily accepted. I arrived promptly at eight o'clock, and at eight-thirty she sailed into the room decorated like a modernistic painting of a rainbow, a paint shop, and a flower garden. Her eyebrows were plucked with the nonchalance that grandma plucked the old red rooster. Her hair was arranged in some uncivilized zulu fashion, and her lips were well varnished and lacquered. There was an air about her of Gardenia, Lilac, and Clover that even a dime store salesgirl would hesitate to wear. She had poured herself into a dress two sizes too small for her, making herself into the resemblance of an eccentric Coca-Cola bottle. When she trotted over to me on her Empire State Building heels my heart turned a somersault, and I shyly proceeded to tell her how sweet she looked and then asked her to a dance.

After arriving at the dance she monopolized the conversation and talked of everything from hats to the party next Saturday. Each sentence she punctuated with pops of the chewing gum that I had so generously donated. The pretty little dream spent the evening making eyes at the orchestra leader and laying her head on my shoulder, thereby wiping the excess powder on my new blue serge suit. When the time came when I longed for my little white bed, the party was just beginning as far as she was concerned. Finally I managed to drag her away by suggesting that on the way home we stop at a hamburger shop. We entered the cafe, and I found to my amazement and financial depreciation that the dainty thing beside me had the capacity of a Kroger grocery warehouse. Tearing her away from the cafe, I deposited my loved one at her front door and evaded all her attempts to inveigle me in for a few hours spooning. With her good night kiss burning my lips I rushed homeward to bed, and now it is no mystery to me that I had a nightmare not unlike that of a fit of delirium tremens.

Walter Burroughs, a former classmate of this year's senior class, who gave his life in Viet Nam so that the Democracy we all love can prosper.

Close his eyes; his work is done!
What to him is friend or foeman;
As man may, he fought his fight
Proved his truth by his self endeavor.
Let him sleep in solemn night;
Fold him in his country's stars,
Roll the drum and fire the volley,
Leave him to God's watching eye,
Trust him to the hand that made him.

Retirement after 45 years of teaching

In every school there are many people who help and guide the students who have problems whether it be large or small. At Triad High School, Mr. Morrow was a person who put the welfare of the students first.

Mr. Morrow was always available with a warm smile and an encouraging word for every student who asked for help.

We wish, in one way, to thank him for what he has done for all of us. To this we dedicate this page as a special recognition to an invaluable friend.
